Humanistic Sand Tray Therapy

Offered by
Jane L. Johnson, LCSW, RPT-S
Linda Klein, LPC, RPT-S
June 11, 2016
Colorado Springs, CO

Humanistic Sand Tray Therapy

Sandtray therapy can delve deeply into the unconscious; bringing that which is hidden to life. The play therapist is the witness to and the companion in exploring the client's innermost world through a non-verbal medium. It can be used as an adjunct to play therapy or a modality all of its own. It can be used with diverse populations and for children as well as adults, couples and groups.

Participants will have the hands-on experience of constructing their own Sandtray world as well as aid others in having insight into their world. Exploring metaphoric language and symbolism will help clinicians as they explore the rich world of sand tray. This training will include lecture, videos, practice exercises as well as working in the sand tray.

Learning Objectives: Participants will:

1. Be able to distinguish between Sandtray and Sandplay.
2. Learn Sandtray from a Humanistic approach and how to implement sand tray into Play Therapy.
3. Be able to set up a Sandtray area for Play Therapy including selection and arrangements of miniatures.
4. Have a protocol for conducting a Play Therapy Sandtray session.
5. Understand the symbolic meaning of toys and environments for Play Therapy.
6. Be able to document a Sandtray Play Therapy session.
