All in the Family: Play Therapy

Parents sometimes bring their child into therapy with the attitude “fix my child”. They may not understand the relationship between what is happening in the family and their child’s misbehavior. Modalities used with families in Play Therapy seek to understand the child’s behavior in the context of their family and to help family members identify their role in family issues. Our goal with families is to strengthen the relationship in all family members using the language of the child – play. Family activities and games promote insight and change within the family. This hands-on workshop will teach activities to use with families as well as techniques for non-directive family play.

Learning Objectives:

Be able to evaluate what level of involvement parents should have the Play Therapy Process.

Gain knowledge of how to engage parents in interacting positively with their children using Play Therapy methods.

Learn how to teach the 4 Filial Play Therapy skills to parents.

Participate in at least ten techniques for use in Family Play Therapy.

Participants will: Receive a set of cards with Family Play Therapy activities to put in your therapy tool kit.
