Every Toy holds a Story: Finding Themes and Metaphors in Play Therapy

In play therapy children use themes and metaphors to communicate their fears, their pain and their joy. When we listen to a child's play; what the toys represent symbolically, when metaphors are created and which themes emerge, we can respond and reply in the child's native language.

This workshop takes you on a journey recognizing the stories in themes and metaphors that you see, hear, and feel in children's therapeutic play. Case examples will demonstrate how toys are used as symbols to construct metaphors. We will dive into the deep meaning of themes as they emerge over a series of play therapy sessions. Video case review and story making activities will elevate our capacity to translate what children tell us through their play.

Learning Objectives Participants will be able to:

- 1. Identify common play themes and their possible meanings given the child's developmental age.
- 2. Describe how play themes emerge from session to session in play therapy.
- 3. Demonstrate recognition of metaphors that children create in therapeutic play.
- 4. Practice participating in the child's metaphorical play dialogue to facilitate their healing process.

5. Design therapeutic metaphors for young clients who need a message of encouragement, hope, or resolution.

6. Compare how meaning is derived for themes and metaphors from different theoretical perspectives.
